THE GOVERNMENT SURRENDERS THE LI CENSE COMPENSATION CLAUSES.

HOW THE CONCESSIONS WERE RECEIVED-MR. PARNELL'S DINNER TO HIS IMPRISONED COLLEAGUES-MR. GLADSTONE AS A SPHINX - ART. MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES. THY CADLE TO THE TRIBUNE!

Copyright : 1888 : By The New York Tribune London, June 16.-The Ministers have at last plucked up the courage to sur-render their license compensation clauses. temperance men are jubilant and the publicans angry. The joy of the Home-Rule opposition expresses itself in a chorus of jeers. They chink it a sign of weakness. Privately, moreover, they remark, or some of them do, that it will be just as easy to obstruct the progress of the Ministerial measure by proposing amendments to other clauses. Mr. Ritchie not very prudently let fall the remark that it was the number of amendments which had convinced the Cabinet that it was useless to persevere with their proposals for the benefit of the publicans. Probably Mr. Caine's figures convinced them. That practical arithmetical person proved, or at least professed to prove, that the claims to compensation under this bill would have amounted to thirty millions sterling, an appalling figure indeed.

Surrenders, or you may call them concessions, being in order, Mr. Goschen, too, has given way on the wine duties. He is a greater master of figures than Mr. Caine. He strikes out from the want to know. The retirement they seek is new duty list all still wines, and reduces the duties from five shillings per dozen to half a crown per gallon when the wine is worth over thirty shillings per dozen, reducing it still further under thirty shillings to one shilling per gallon. Yet the sum accruing to the revenue remains the same. The explanation is that the amount of duty was originally much underestimated.

Irish incidents of the week have not been numerous nor important. Nothing further has been heard from the Bishop of Limerick or from any other Irish Bishop on the burning question of the Papal rescript. The English have taken much less notice of Dr. O'Dwyer's address than might have been expected. They say, however, that it is a challenge which the other ons cannot well refuse to notice in some way. Dr. O'Dwyer declared explicitly that he spoke for his episcopal colleagues, as well as for himself. "We are all agreed," said he. If they do not dissent, they will be thought to have consented.

Some pains were taken to deny that Mr. Parnell meant to give a dinner to those of his colleagues whom Mr. Balfour had imprisoned for law-breaking, but the dinner was given all the same. Parneli's after-dinner oratory was thought to show more feeling than is usual with him. He dropped his arctic manner and poured out a torrent his indignation against the Chief Secretary for enforcing the law. The epithets coward" and "dastard" which Mr. Dillon applied to Mr. Balfour sound rather like an effort to rise to the heights, or perhaps descend to the depths, expected of him. Both speeches were interesting. out contained nothing new.

The same may be said of Lord Rosebery's speech at Inverness. He spoke in his best vein, at times in a new vein, and with wit and weight throughout. But neither from him nor from anybody else does any hint whatever come of Mr. Gladstone's new measure of Home Rule. Mr. Chamberlain's latest entreaty to know remains without response from any oracle. "Mr. Gladstone," says the author of the Fisheries Treaty, " calls that Birmingham scheme, which some people attributed to me, moonshine. At least it is a scheme. He either has none which he is willing to avow, or means in the end to revert to those old Home Rule bills which the House and the country have both rejected, and which he allows his friends to describe as dead." I give the substance of what Mr. Chamberlain said, not his words.

Mr. Gladstone, meantime, instead of complying with Mr. Chamberlain's curiesity, addresses a fresh manifesto to Lord Hartington, complaining of broken pledges, of coercion, and of many other things. "Only an electioneering squib," cry out the Unionist journals; and they say that Mr. Gladstone was in such a hurry to reach the electors of the Ayr Burghs that he sent his letter to the papers before sending it to Lord Hartington. "Not polite," continue they; but without evoking from the Grand Old Man any spelogy whatever.

Mr. Gladstone's health continues to be the subject of numerous paragraphs in the Home Rule pa pers, all vehemently insisting that their leader was never better nor younger. There is perhaps a little too much of this. Mr. Gladstone is not ill, though people begin to think so when they see his friends so frequently alleging in print the exceeding goodness of his health. But neither does he seem so strong or vigorous or confident in his own power of work as he did last year. much older; his voice is, or lately has been, very husky; he talks less and with less vivacity; and on the whole, he does not seem much younger than most men of sixty.

M. Clemenceau's visit to England might be supposed to have some political end in view. He knows England and English well enough to be able to sound in a short time Ministers if he meets them, and to discover whither English opinion with reference to French affairs is really tending. Besides, the story is current that General Boulanger is coming over. It is affirmed that Mr. Howard Vincent, M. P., lately Director of Criminal Investigation, has invited him, and that General Boulanger will be Mr. Vincent's guest while here. Why should be not? Buffalo Bill was to be met last summer at Mr. Vincent's house in Grosvenor

M. Clemenceau, however, says that his visit has no political object. He came on Admiral Maxse's invitation for a few days' relaxation. The Radical leader seems in great health and spirits. He has grown slightly stouter, as well as grayer, but has lost none of his elasticity of sanner or exuberant intellectual energy.

Our countryman Mr. Abbey's original drawings of the illustrations to "She Stoops to Conquer' are to be exhibited in London. Good as the cuts are, remarks Mr. Stephens, the Aristarchus of The Athenaeum," the drawings surpass them in finish, vivacity and brightness.

On the authority of the journal, but not of the same critic, a lamentable failure in song was made by the American performer who somewhat rashly has called herself Mile. Columbia. Who this lady is I know not, but the English public is told that though she sang at Covent Garden in "L'Africaine," she is deficient in voice, in method, and in every other attribute constituting an acceptable lyric artist.

There is no important dramatic news. It has been suggested that the London theatres should close on the day of the Emperor's funeral, but this can only be done by common consent.

Prompt action could settle the matter, for you undertook to make it hot for old Foster & Co. Let us have some evidence of your power to do so.

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY. A QUIET KIND OF TIME.

THE CITY PRACTICALLY DESERTED BY LEISURE

FOLK-WHERE THEY ENJOY THEMSELVES. There has been a week during the last seven days, but it was not "in society." Society has scattered and New-York is comparatively empty of the fashionable people whose goings to and fre are of importance enough to be talked about. Early last week uptown neighborhoods assumed their melancholy summer aspect of deserted streets and closed houses. The plumber and carpenter have been let loose in many fine man-sions to make the summer repairs; and these workmen are the only signs of life in many blocks. The clubs are lively, especially those at which the cooking is endurable; for the head of the family and his hopeful heir. who have stayed in town, don't dine at ho Delmonico's, but with their bachelor friends at the club. All the fashionable people who have been able to arrange it are at their country places. It is a question mewhat discussed of late-to what extent will the desire for seclusion, or exclusion, carry wealthy Americans; and will this tendency ruin entirely the vast hotel and big boarding houses at pleasure resorts ! But there is a limit to the retirement which fushionable people want. It is not the seclusion of poets. Indeed, it is not so much seclusion for themselves as it is exclusion for those whom they do not know, and don't the society of people they find agreeable, with whom they feel at home, and who are not new to them. This kind of soltude they can find only in country places, where all the neighbors, from miles only a pleasant tennis ground assembly. Moreover, even if it is only the most cultivated of the leisure classes who seek a really retired house, most fashion able New-Yorkers like little crowds, such as are found at the racecourses and in the immediate vicin ity of country clubs. This fact accounts for the popularity of Pelham, Larchmount Manor, the Rockaways and the Oranges. People who live in these places are not in search of solitude. They want plenty of company, but no noisy hotels.

It certainly was not a morbid desire to get away from people that took crowds of fashionable New Yorkers to the Suburban Handicap at Sheepshead Bay on Thursday. Nor can lawn fetes be due to a fondness for solitude. These quiet diversions abounded last week on Staten Island, at Orange and in various other suburban places. New-Haven, perhaps, comes under this head, and the lawn tennis tournament there next week will, doubtless, furnish pleasant excitement for many people besides the regular residents of the town. And while Boston, of course, is not quite a suburb, yet New-Yorkers are not devoid of interest in the garden parties announced to take place in and about that city soon. Nearer home, at Orange, June 25, a lawn fete of large dimensions will

So far as marrying is concerned little was accomplished in New-York last week. However the wedding of Miss Foster to H. H. Woods, at Trinity Church Thursday noon, was of interest. Old Trinity is an clfective place for a wedding and this afflair was a very precty one. There was a maid of honor in pink, who contrasted charmingly with the bride's dress in white. Best man and ushers all did their part gracefully, and as much can be said for the officiating clergymen. In the evening, All Souls' (Unitarian) Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Alice Foote, and Allen McDougall. The bride was in white faille franceise, and the two bridesmalds in white Of course, before this array of loveliness the ushers, best man and even the bridegroom paled in splendor. A reception at No. 30 West Eleventh-st. followed. In the Church of the Purftans, in One-hundred and thirtieth st., Miss May Walker was married to B. F. Hooper, this same evening. Two bridesmaids and a maid of honor, with the proper quota of ushers and a best man, assisted. Earlier in the week, on Tuesday, there was a pretty ceremony in the Church of the Holy Spirit, at Madison-ave., and Sixtysixth-st., when Miss Fannie Clifford became Mrs. Eichard Merrifield. The bride showed ber excellent taste and strong sense of pro-priety by wearing a white satin gown. Four bridesmaids and a maid-of-honor were also much admired, and by their presence helped to contradict the rumor that bridesmaids are going out of fashion. This is about all that can be said of the weddings in town. me pleasant interest was felt everywhere in the Carfield weddings at Mentor, Chio, on Thursday. They were certainly unconventional ceremonies, one of the brides not even seeing fit to wear a veil. Not the opening performance. only interest, but some relief, was caused by the announcement in the newspapers on Friday morning that Miss Amelic Rives had been married the day of this town. The bridegroom is not widely known in New-York, as he has lived most of his time abroad, but those who are acquainted with Miss Rives declare that she is to be congratulated.

This week will be most entirely devoid of incidents of social interest in town. The marriage of Miss Binsse and Reginald Franckivn on Tuesday at 4 p. m. at No. 45 West Nineteenth-st., will prove an exception to the rule and will rouse pleasant excitement for a day at least. The engagement is announced of C. C. Buel and Miss Snow, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Webb, "John Paul."

SELECTIONS FROM THE MAIL.

STORY'S DESIGN FOR THE GRANT MAUSOLEUM. To the Editor of The Tribune.

W. W. Story, of Rome, has sent me a photo graph of his proposed plan for the Mausoleum of He has done this at my request, as I was so Grant. pleased with a photograph of it, which I accidentally saw in London that I asked the privilege of showing this splendid design to the citizens of New-York. I hope that the prospect of securing such an ornament for the bold headland where our great General still commands the situation may inspire a speedy renewal of interest in the Mausoleum, which should outrank all other monuments, as the great man whom it would commemorate outranked all others in the days of our direst need. Mr. Story in this design has fortunately combined the three great characters and services of Grant-first as citizen, then as soldier, as President; and within the first chamber of the Mausoleum, where he would have the great captain be, under his own marble image like a Templar tain be, under his own marole image like a Templar of old, he proposes one bas relief, which will touch the hearts of his countrymen. It is a recumbent figure of a dying man, with a pencil and paper in his band, writing the book which was to pay his debts, and to give back to his family the fortune so unjustly wrenched from him. Frederick, Emperor of Germany, has left a similar shadow on the wall for men to admire.

WHAT THE BANDANNA REALLY SYMBOLIZES. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: The Democrats, not liking the American flag for a symbol in this campaign, have hoisted the red bandanna. Weil, what does this red bandanna signify ! It signifies the possession of a filthy personal habit and desire to avoid having to send too many white handkerchiefs to the laundry. The red bandanna conceals the dirt, and the owner of the filthy habit able to use one red bandanna as long as he could use seven white handkerchiefs. It is a very suitable em-blem for the party. ## WHY THEY LIKE GRESHAM.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: Judge Gresham I believe is the man who ought to receive the nomination. He seems to be the people's candidate in the West and especially the Northwest. He has a host of friends in this State and city, notwithstanding the fact that Wisconsin will present the name of Governor Rusk. In the States where there are other candidates he seems to be second choice.

Judge Gresham supported Mr. Blaine in the last campaign. He is a Protectionist and a strong one, Every office he has held to the credit of hir self and to the people, a good Cabinet officer, a good judge and a good general. These are the reasons the people of the Northwest and West are in favor of his being the nominee.

KILLED BY THE LIGHTNING.

VALUABLE HORSES STRUCK ON FRIDAY. EXPERIENCE OF THE UNFORTUNATE YACRISMEN-A SICK WOMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED-MANY BUILDINGS SET ON FIRE.

About 11 o'clock on Friday night a barn owned by H. C. Morse, at Brighton place, Coney Island, was struck by a flash of lightning and set on fire. The bolt entered the barn at a corner of the roof, which was charred, travelled downward, splitting a pitchfork in pieces, and, before entering the ground, killed a mare valued at $15,000. The animal belonged to M. D. Reid, of San Francisco, who had been Mr. Morse's guest for a few weeks. Mr. Reid came East at an expense of several hundred dollars to show the animal at Coney Island and in this district. The mare's name was Oregon Beauty. She was a cross be tween a Clydesdale and French Canadian, dark chestnut in color, with white mane and tail, the mane being four to nine feet in length, and the tail sweeping the ground. 1 Mr. Reid's loss is not covered by insurance. An old horse, valued at $50, in the stall adjoining, escaped unhurt. A space of only thirty feet divides Mr. Morse's house from the barn. There were ten persons in the house at the time. The shock was felt and caused much alarm, a woman going into a faint from which she did not recover for some time. Mr. Morse, on running out, found the barn on fire, but with the assistance of Mr. Reid and a few other men extinguished the flames before much damage had been done.

The famous trotting stallion Pancoast, owned by John H. Schultz, the millionaire baker of ooklyn, was struck by lightning on Friday night and severely burned about the eyes and ears. He was in his box at Mr. Schultz's half-mile track, pear Parkville, L. L, at the time, and the shock partly paralyzed him for a short time. Apparently, however, the horse fully recovered from this and is now thought not to be seriously injured. Nevertheless, Mr. Schultz took a couple of veterinary surgeons out to the track with him yesterday and they will remain with the animal until all possibilities of danger from the shock have passed. Pancoast, who was the sire of the great Patron, was purchased by Mr. Schultz a few years ago for $27,000.

CLINGING FOR THREE HOURS TO A YACHT. The men who were rescued during the storm on Friday night from the capsized vacht off Bedlow's Island, by three men from the Staten Island ferrybeat Southfield, were Captain David Loper, Richard Pringle, Victor Shieldi, Frank Macance and two others whose names could not be ascertained. The yacht was the Needles, of the Pavonia Yacht Club, of Jersey City, owned by Captain Loper. The story of the disaster is told by Mr. Pringle. He said:

We left Jersey City on the Needles at 6 p. m. for a sall to Staten Island. We arrived at the Island, had som refreshments and started for home at 7:20 p. m. W saw the storm coming and were just back of Bedlow's Island when it burst. The thunder and lightning were awful and at the first blow our boat was capsized. We all managed to hold on the keel and we shouted as we never shouted before. The soldlers on the Island heard us and answered back, but could not come to our assist ce because they had no boat. They fired off guns and op rockets as signals of distress. keel for three hours and I can tell you it was the longest three hours I ever put in. I was just about to let go and make an effort to swim to the Island when the uthfield's lifeboat came up and rescued us

The rescued yachtsmen were taken to Bedlow's Island and thence with their rescuers to New-York on the Government boat Atlantic. Search was made for the yacht yesterday, but no trace of her could be discovered. The storm did no damage could be discovered. The storm did no damage in Jersey-City of any consequence; on the contrary, it was something of a benefit, as the heavy rain cleaned the streets somewhat.

The Chapman Wrecking Company, of this city, yesterday began the work of raising the yacht Agnes, which was sunk on Friday night while lying at anchor off Stapleton. The wreckers expect to have the yacht raised this morning. The body of the mate, William Anderson, who went down with the ill-fated yacht, has not been recovered. The sloop Josie, which was capsized off Stapleton, was raised yesterday. During the storm the lightning struck the house of Edward Burbank, at Garretson's station, and a barn at the same place, owhed by James Barnes. The house was slightly damaged, but the barn was totally destroyed by fire.

Mr. Kiralfy last night told a reporter that the Mr. Kirally last hight told a reporter that the damage by the storm to the scenery and other effects of the "Fall of Rome" would amount to $10,000. He said that he had already put men to work to repair the damage, and he did not expect that there would be much delay in giving PERIL OF A WOMAN IN NEWARK. When the electric storm struck Newark on Friers from their posts. A lightning bolt struck a large four-story frame dwelling-house at No. 138 Belmont-ave. Mrs. Herman Knobel with her one-day old child was on the top floor. Simultaneously with the electric flash the tornado came. In an instant the roof of the house was torn off and blown away. The shattered chimney fell into the upper rooms, the bricks breaking Mrs. Knobel's right leg in two places, but not injuring the child. Hailstones and rain beat upon them, the other occupants of the house fied in terror to the street, dressed only in their night clothes.

Mr. Knoble summoned a physician, and the mother and child were promptly cared for. The mother was in such a dangerous condition yesterday that she was removed to St. Barnabas's Hospital. that she was removed to Sc. harmacous riosphate that the leg will be amputated and the shock may prove Intal.

The lights in Forty-seventh-st, and Forty-third-st, that went out had been all quickly repaired and everything was running smoothly. ning smoothly

NEW-YORK COOLER THAN SOME PLACES. People here who felt disposed to grumble about the weather yesterday might have found some consolation in the fact that at Philadelphia, Washington, New-Orleans and several other cities the thermometer registered several degrees higher than it did in New-York. Here the temperature was 71 degrees at 7 a. m., and in a few hours it reached 84.6, which was the maximum. At 2 p. m. it came down to 80 degrees. The previous day was several degrees warmer than Saturday though many people were under the impression that yesterday was the hotter of the two days. At 2 p. m. on Friday the thermometer stood 85 degrees, and the maximum was 87.4 degrees. The first two weeks of this June have not been as warm as the first half of the corresponding month last year. The humidity in New-York yesterday morning at 7 o'clock was 86 per cent, while on the previous day at the same hour it was 90 per cent.
